Hughes To Testify In Senate Hearing On War Plant Deals

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—Senate investigators today ordered plane maker Howard Hughes to the witness stand at 2 p. m. EDT for questioning on his charges that he is trying to "blackmail" him into an air line merger.

The millionaire industrialist and movie producer flew here from the west coast in his private converted bomber. He said on arrival that he would be "happy" to repeat under oath charges he has fired at Chairman Owen Brewster, R. Me., of the Senate war investigating committee.

A subcommittee headed by Sen. Homer Ferguson, R. Mich., is looking in Hughes plane contracts adding up to four aircraft and $40,000,000. An $18,000,000 wooden flying boat built by Hughes has yet to fly. Of three photo reconnaissance planes constructed under a $22,000,000 contract, one cracked up, the Army has one, and Hughes is testing the third.

Hughes, who came equipped with a quantity of documents and records, was kept waiting by the committee while his official party-thrasher and entertainer of big wigs, John W. Meyer, gave further details about his free-spending labors.

The plane maker has accused Brewster of ordering the current investigation to force him to merge his Trans-World Airlines with Pan American Airways.

He said in a statement issued on the west coast that Brewster once offered to call off the probe if he would agree to the merger. Brewster has long been fighting for legislation to limit U. S. overseas air business to one big company. He contends such a company should compete better with foreign lines than many independent firms.

Brewster charged Hughes to repeat his charges under oath and the industrialist promptly accepted. But Ferguson said he would not be permitted to open his testimony with any prepared statement.

Instead, the tall, skinny, slightly deaf Hughes will have to start by answering committee questions. Meanwhile, Meyer told of spending $3,732.77 in three years on dinners, parties and other favors for Col. James G. Hall, Air Force photo reconnaissance chief at the Pentagon before and after the Hughes photo plane contract was let.

Roy F. Sherwood, Hughes auditor, told the subcommittee that while Meyer was spending the $164,000, Hughes firms did $300,000,000 worth of business.

Thus, Sherwood said, Meyer's expenditures amounted to just ".32, 000th of one per cent" of the business total.

"I think that's very cheap," Meyer commented.

During one New York weekend, in January, 1944, Meyer said, he offered up $600 worth of entertainment checks for Hall.

Hughes, meanwhile, promised to go over in detail his charges against Brewster.

Bleachers Collapse At Goshen Track Injuring 30 Persons

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 6 (UP)—Two newly erected bleacher sections at Goshen Race track here collapsed today beneath the weight of the crowd attending the running of the famed Hambletonian Stakes, and police said 30 persons were injured, six of them seriously.

About 400 spectators were in the new bleacher section, built at the head of the stretch, when the stands collapsed just after the first trotting race of the day.

Most of those in the two bleacher sections which collapsed escaped with minor bruises, and required no hospital treatment, but about 30 were taken to Goshen hospital.

Most of them in private cars. The track first aid station cared for scores of others who suffered only scratches and bruises.

Weather Man Says Heat Spell Is Only Beginning

By United Press

A faint breath of cool air moving across Iowa promised some relief from the heat wave in the midwest today, but the weatherman said most of the nation would continue hot.

Even in the north central states, relief will be only temporary, U. S. forecasters said. The cooler air was moving eastward from Western Iowa and had penetrated Nebraska and northwestern Wisconsin.

It originally was scheduled to bring lower temperatures to northern Illinois and Indiana tonight, but forecasters said the cool front was moving slowly and would not hit Chicago until tomorrow.

They said southern Illinois and Indiana might get some relief from the heat by tomorrow night, but that the cool air mass probably would extend no farther south.

Meanwhile, another heat wave was moving toward the Dakotas, and was scheduled to descend on the lower midwest and the east during the week-end.

The heat was the principal topic of conversation from California to the Appalachian mountains yesterday.

The mercury soared to 115 at Blythe, Calif., the hottest spot in the nation. It was 111 at Yuma, Ariz.; 107 at Fresno, Calif.; and at Advance, Mo.; and 103 at Topeka, Kan. where temperatures have topped 100 nine times in the past 10 days.

Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Terre Haute, Ind.; St. Louis, Mo.; and Omaha, Neb., all reported readings of 102. Chicago, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Fond du Lac, Wis., registered 100 degrees.

At Duluth, Minn., on the western tip of Lake Superior, the temperature was a cool 69 degrees, but 39 (Continued on Page Two)

Kentucky Educator Says State Teacher Shortage To Continue

LEXINGTON, Aug. 6 (UP)—The "pitifully few" 1947 college and university graduates now entering the teaching field in Kentucky will have little effect on the critical teacher shortage and prospects are "disappointingly good" that the trend will continue until at least 1950, according to Dr. M. E. Ligon, veteran director of the University of Kentucky Teacher Placement Bureau.

"Under normal conditions, we should be back to where we were before the war by 1950," Dr. Ligon said. "By that time the last of the 'war' baby (small enrollment) classes will have been graduated and the effect of increased post-war registrations should begin to meet the demand."

While optimistic that the situation would be bettered eventually, the U. K. director also pointed out a disturbing factor. "The chief difficulty after the pre-war level of available instructors has been reached undoubtedly will be that enrollments in both high schools and colleges will have grown out of proportion to pre-war levels."

More teachers will be necessary than before the war to instruct the larger number of students. For this reason, steps must be taken now to prevent an already critical shortage from becoming more serious, he declared. More prospective teachers must be attracted to the teaching profession.

As one means of accomplishing this end, Dr. Ligon advocated a raise in the assessed valuation of property in the school districts of Kentucky. "Property in this state is assessed at a pitifully low value in proportion to its real worth. As a result, not enough money can be raised by taxation to support a school program that would allow paying its teachers the $2,400 minimum yearly salary necessary to meet competition."

"Suggestions that the rate of property taxation for school purposes be raised have been met in many parts of the state with little success. Even with the full rate levied, not enough funds are raised. The solution should be a fair assessed valuation," he said.

As an illustration of the current shortage of qualified teachers, Dr. Ligon cited the fact that the U. K. Teacher Placement Bureau during the last year had approximately 2,142 requests for teachers from 71 of the 120 counties, 36 other states and two U. S. territories and had only 217 candidates registered. Only 73 of the candidates for placement in teaching positions were recent graduates.

He pointed out further that at the present time the bureau has only 218 registrants and slightly more requests than last year. Mrs. D. C. Kemper, bureau secretary who keeps the statistics on candidates estimated that approximately 14 per cent of the currently listed persons are now employed and seeking to better their positions.

"Sixty-nine have already been placed for the coming year. Others are specialists in fields for which there is not a demand at present or are not employed for some reason."

There is no noticeable increase in Kentucky of the reported national trend of teachers leaving the profession, Dr. Ligon said.

Car Prices Boosted

DETROIT, Aug. 6 (UP)—The Kaiser-Frazer Corporation today announced a price increase of $99 on its standard Frazer model, effective immediately.

The boost was the third by auto manufacturers within a week and followed Packard's announcement last night of a price increase on all its models $92 to $200.

4 County Jersey Herds Receive High Ratings

COLUMBUS, Ohio, August 6 (UP)—Several breeders of registered Jersey cattle in Kentucky have just had their herds classified for type under the program of the American Jersey Cattle Club, whose headquarters are here. Lynn Copeland, Dairy Specialist of the University of Tennessee, an official inspector for the Cattle Club, made the classifications on these herds.

In the Jersey Herd Classification program each animal inspected is compared for type with the breed's score card which allows 100 points as a perfect score. Ratings are given to each animal by the designations of Excellent, Very Good, Good Plus, Good, Fair or Poor, depending on the number of points each animal would rate on the score card.

Thirty-one animals owned by four Jersey breeders were type rated in this classification work. These 31 animals averaged 83.47 per cent, which is indeed a credit to the type of cattle being developed by these progressive breeders. The animals classified were owned by the following Jersey breeders: G. B. Scott, Murray; Garland Schmidt, Hickory; Murray State College, Murray; and W. R. Jones, Jr., Murray.

Veterans Down Breeds 4-2 In First Of Final Series

By Don Brumbaugh (League Statistician)

The College Vets took the first game from the Murray Breds by a score of 4-2 in the first round of the final playoff series at Murray High field last night.

W. T. Solomons won his third series game as he limited the Breds to seven hits while striking out eight and walking two. Dick Farrell allowed only five hits, struck out two and walked four.

The Breds scored their two runs in the sixth inning when Vince Marquess singled to left, Neal Hobart bunted to right, Bill McClure bunted to the pitcher, and Sam Jones, safe, leading the bases. Tom Nield bunted to right driving in Marquess and Hobart scored on a wild pitch. Solomons then struck out McGrath, Eans popped to Crowell, and Lindsay fled to Underwood to end the inning with men on second and third.

The Vets scored in the fourth on a long home run to center-field by Dave Carlisle. In the sixth, Ted Coil singled to right-center and stole second. Jim Pearce walked. Dave Carlisle then sacrificed both runners to the next base. Bill McClure singled to center driving in Coil. Jack Lambert doubled to center driving in Pearce. Jones went out McClure to McGrath but Crowell scored. Ted Yates ended the inning on a grounder, McClure to McGrath.

Seven Million Dollar Revenue Increase Is Made In TVA Cities

DECATUR, Tenn., Aug. 6 (UP)—The 19 municipalities and cooperatives distributing Tennessee Valley Authority power had combined revenues for the fiscal year which ended June 30 of more than $50,000,000, Gordon R. Clapp, TVA board chairman, said today.

Clapp told the annual meeting of the volunteer electric membership cooperative that this was an increase of about $7,000,000 over the previous fiscal year and was brought about by the sale of more than 4,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity.

Other figures released by Clapp included the following:

The municipalities and cooperatives added about 40,000 new rural customers and built more than 6,000 miles of new power lines during the year.

The average residential consumer used 2,200 kilowatt hours of power during the year, an increase of 300 hours at a cost of 1-2-3 cents a kilowatt hour.

Clapp said the volunteer cooperatives started in 1936 with 43 miles of lines serving 139 customers but now has 975 miles in 13 counties and 8,000 members.

State To Help Road Builders Slowed By Rain

FRANKFORT, Ky., August 6 (UP)—With almost every highway construction facing payment of damages for failure to complete work on contracts awarded, the state stands ready to cooperate by "reasonable time extension," J. Stephen Watkins, Commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Highways, assured a group of contractors at a conference today. W. O. Snyder, secretary of the Kentucky Association of Highway Contractors, and Marion Ross, secretary of the Plant-Mix Asphalt Association headed the group of contractors and materials people attending the conference.

"We want you gentlemen to understand that the department appreciates your cooperation—and your fair and reasonable price—and that it is not our wish to see you penalized for the freakish weather of the past several months," Mr. Watkins said. "You may be assured that a committee from the department will take under advisement the conditions which affect your work and that relief will be granted."

Mr. Snyder, speaking for the contractors, announced that weather bureau reports from April 1 to August 1 in the Lexington area indicate rains for 32 days while the same period in the Louisville area reported 54 days. Contractors from western Kentucky ranged from 33 to 42 days too wet to work during the normal summer construction period.

Mr. Ross announced that materials suppliers were from 25 percent to 75 percent behind on deliveries. "I do not remember a time when conditions such as these have prevailed in the road building industry," he said.

Lashley was here on his way home from Brown's farm in Leonard, N. D.

The time and place for the party weren't decided, but the event may be next summer, he said.

The Kentucky quads, Mildred, John, Martine and Beulah have seven other brothers and sisters.

Decision Is Deferred On Labor Law Immunity

The country will have to wait awhile to learn whether organized labor's strategy may successfully get around the central purpose of the Taft-Hartley Act. This purpose was to place upon unions a legal responsibility for their acts. Among other things, the law permits suits for damages against unions which break contracts by striking.

In negotiations between Ford and the United Automobile Workers, the question arose whether labor, through its economic power—that, strike or threat of strike—could force an employer to grant it immunity from the law in this respect. If Ford had agreed, this issue doubtless would have been projected into bargaining generally by unions strong enough to press it. Obviously, a large gain would have been won by unions, partially offsetting their failure to prevent passage of the new labor law.

However, the answer is deferred for a year, as far as Ford is concerned. Under a compromise which came in the nick of time to stop a strike, there will be in that period no damage suits by Ford for breach of contract through strikes or work stoppages. Meanwhile, a committee representing company and workers will try to find a solution to the question of union liability.

If Ford has won peace for a year, it has done so by dint of an agreement which seems to be full of pointlessness on both sides. The U.A.W. solemnly is given the "right to strike" on the issue if there is no solution after a year's discussion. Actually, the question is likely to be settled otherwise before the year is out, and what Ford has done is to leave the settlement to others. It is equally apparent that the union, as if uncertain of its ground, was just as content to wait and see.

Both the company and the union doubtless know that the compromise means nothing at all, except the nationalization of a strike. No private agreement can grant the right to strike on an issue which may be interpreted by courts or the N.L.R.B., or by simple reading of the law, to be prohibited as a reason for striking. And at that, it seems a bit extraordinary when a unit of organized labor, which still holds dogmatically to its right to strike without qualification, becomes a party to a provision of the sort.

Thus there is a beginning of the question whether the Taft-Hartley Act is to be circumvented by private understanding. It is just as well, because this is not the way to undo legislation, anyhow. And to press the point is an impropriety on labor's part because it confesses either an intention to break a contract or a lack of authority to prevent its breach by wildcat strikes. The war converted automobile industry was marked by more unauthorized walkouts perhaps than any other.

Adding Organic Matter to Soils Cited As 'No. 1' Problem of Midwest Farmers

Plenty of Organic Matter Plus Plant Foods Spells Big Corn Crops.

ADDING organic matter to their soils is the Number 1 problem of many Midwestern farmers, declared Dr. F. C. Bauer, professor of soil fertility of the University of Illinois. This organic matter must come through the return of manure, straw, composts and other crop residues of the soil, and through the use of legumes and grasses in the rotation.

When you put organic matter back into the soil, and especially that derived from deep-rooted legumes, you are also adding nitrogen, considered by many the one element most limiting to crop yields. Even on some of the best of soils the organic matter supply is running dangerously low. Years of intensive cropping and livestock raising, without the return of crop residues, manures and plant food nutrients, have pulled deeply on the original supply, Dr. Bauer pointed out.

For most of their organic matter supplies, farmers must depend on deep-rooted legumes and grasses grown in the rotation. Here the use of lime according to soil tests, to condition the soil for the growth of legumes and adding plant foods needed for high yields, is essential to a continuing organic matter supply.

Lime, if it is to do its best work, should be put on at least six months ahead of seeding, research at several experiment stations indicates. At the time of seeding, soil building amounts of plant food should be added to the land.

Work at some experiment stations have shown that under same conditions even large amounts of organic matter will not furnish enough nitrogen for maximum corn yields. When extra amounts of nitrogen are put on corn, however, farmers should be certain that the other plant foods, phosphorus and potash, are in the soil in proper proportion.

Domestic industrial stocks of fats and oils will be about the same on November 1, 1947, as on that date a year ago, when they were the smallest in the past 18 years, the Department of Agriculture reports.

Domestic fats and oils crops are expected to be larger this year than last year, but industry's requirements have been such a drain upon fats and oils stocks that household grease salvaged by American women has been a most important factor in the production of goods that used this raw material.

"Used cooking fats turned in by women," says Secretary of Agriculture Clayton F. Anderson, "have been and continue to be an important part of our total industrial fats supply."

Weather Man Says Heat Will Continue

miles away at Solon Springs, Wis., beyond the reach of the lake breezes, residents sweltered in 104 degree heat.

The weather bureau said the hot weather would continue through today in Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, but that cooler weather and thundershowers would bring relief tonight.

The hot spell was scheduled to continue in eastern Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee and warmer weather was predicted for New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile, in North and South Dakota, where temperatures were not expected to go much above 80 today, the weatherman said the relief was only temporary and that it would be warmer again tomorrow. He said the heat would be turned on again full blast by Friday.

Most of the residents in the heat zone spent a large share of their time yesterday attempting to cool off. Beaches and air-conditioned theatres were packed.

At Chicago, police worked overtime trying to catch up with unauthorized persons who opened fire hydrants to give themselves showers at the city's expense.

People in Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., felt they were the unluckiest in the nation. They couldn't even take a dip to cool off because their local swimming pool was closed for repairs.

Doctors came forth with formulae for the best way to withstand the heat. They advised lots of water, not much food, no excitement and no feed drinks.

At Chicago, Gerry Schemmel, operator of an ice cream parlor, said he had the perfect dessert for the hot weather.

Schemmel said anyone who can eat two of the concoctions gets the second one free. Eat three and you don't have to pay a cent.

Domestic industrial stocks of fats and oils will be about the same on November 1, 1947, as on that date a year ago, when they were the smallest in the past 18 years, the Department of Agriculture reports.

Domestic fats and oils crops are expected to be larger this year than last year, but industry's requirements have been such a drain upon fats and oils stocks that household grease salvaged by American women has been a most important factor in the production of goods that used this raw material.

"Used cooking fats turned in by women," says Secretary of Agriculture Clayton F. Anderson, "have been and continue to be an important part of our total industrial fats supply."

Seven Bills Veiled

Washington, Aug. 6 (UP)—President Truman by pocket veto today killed seven bills, including measures to set up a national science foundation and to exclude certain newspaper vendors from coverage of the social security act.

He told a news conference that final plans are now being made for the bond redemption. In arguing that veterans keep their bonds until their five-year maturity, Snyder emphasized that the interest rate of 2.12 per cent is "unusually good."

CHAPTER NINE

CHARLENE UPFIELD'S room looked more attractive to Leitha than the rest of the house. The curtains had been drawn at the windows and the sun streamed in. There were many pictures on the walls, a number of personal belongings, a great deal of color. No doubt Mrs. Upfield had redecorated it to her taste.

"I'll come in for a few minutes," Leitha consented. With her patient resting, there were no immediate demands upon her time.

"This is very cozy," she said, sitting in a big "chair-couch" rocker. There was a low table with the remains of breakfast on the tray.

"It is, isn't it?" Charlene Upfield beamed. She sat down on a couch, tucking her feet beneath her. "There's still some coffee war, you have some?" She leaned forward to inspect the pot. "It's still hot too. I always make coffee in my room—just the way I like it. We are great coffee drinkers, we Tannahills."

Leitha smiled and said that she never drank any besides her one cup with breakfast. She was reminded of Andrew having said that Mrs. Upfield was not strictly speaking, a Tannahill. Yet she had boasted of sharing their customs as if to impress the newcomer.

"How do you think you are going to like Tannahill?" she asked, having said that if Leitha did not mind, she would have a little coffee, anyway. She cradled the fragile cup between her two plump hands, taking a sip now and then.

Leitha said she thought she'd like Tannahill very much. That was the polite response, surely. And she felt that Mrs. Upfield's question was not one of idle curiosity or prying, as some of Andrew could have been, but that it came from the hope that anyone visiting Tannahill would find it agreeable.

"It's a wonderful place, really," the other woman's eyes were filled with pride. "It's been down once you know, when Sherman passed this way. Uncle Mason had it rebuilt exactly like the original house. Some of the woodwork goes, and the lot is very secret. They are over a hundred years old. Tannahill, I think, is all too common. So many people have named their houses after him, it's almost ridiculous. But I think she's wrong."

Leitha said that she was inclined to agree with Mrs. Upfield. Privately she thought she could also understand Tannahill's reasons. She was accustomed to being the center of attention. It was not surprising, she thought, that she should find quite so oppressive as at first. It might prove peaceful, when one got completely used to it.

"PLEASE don't call me Mrs. Upfield," that lady said now in her littlest, pliest voice. "My eyes were beaming again. 'I would like to be friends, Mrs. Maloney. I shall call you by your first name. I do get bored at times with my husband dead—he was killed in the first war, as you know. And now my son is in the Marines.'"

Leitha had not known there was a son, and she had been hoping to interest her in the family. She replied that thought as an old one, since Charlene Upfield did not employ her as that sort of person.

"I'll be glad to call you Charlene," she said, and she added all the while that she could break her rule with this friendly little creature. But Leitha did not really respond to the offer of friendship. It was something one could not give until it was won.

"You have such a pretty name," Leitha said.

"Yes."
